

Disclaimer- Please Read

This Web Site is maintained to provide a free service to assist the public in understanding family law.

The user should find links to numerous sources of information related to many questions that arise in the context of family law. There is no charge for use services of this site and the information provided in it. However, as a condition to using this site, visitors must agree to the Terms and Conditions of Use and the Disclaimer Terms and Conditions.

I understand this Web Site does not provide legal services or advice, but general information concerning family law. I understand that if legal advice is needed, a competent and experienced attorney should be consulted.

Although the author of this Web Site may be available for consultation, I understand that any emails I send do not create any attorney client relationship, unless and until a signed attorney retention contract is executed by Patricia McKinnon. I further understand that although a sincere effort has been made to provide timely and accurate information, the general conclusions, statements and propositions set forth in this site may in some instances be inapplicable or incorrect due to variations in local, state and Federal law.

This site is provided on an as is basis. There is no warranty whatsoever of any kind, express or implied regarding the content of this Web Site. Thus, I understand and accept there is no warranty of accuracy, of fitness for intended use, or merchantability. I also understand that as to all links to any other legal, educational, news, government or private Web Site, the authors of this Web Site have no control of supervisory authority and cannot be held responsible for the content of those sites.

I Accept

I Decline